Rauma

Just a day trip away from Stockholm and Helsinki, Rauma is a town of unique cultural importance. Founded in 1442, this town of 40,000 inhabitants is home to two UNESCO World Heritage sites.

Rauma is also Finland's lace-making capital, and a thriving lace-making tradition is one of the town's specialities.

The jewel in the crown of Finland's third oldest town is the wooden town centre of Old Rauma. The largest of its kind in Scandinavia, Old Rauma dates back to Finland's Middle Ages. With its markets, arts and crafts centres and cafés, this idyllic environment was chosen as a UNESCO World Heritage site in 1991. Today the 30 hectare area is a vibrant town centre with a number of specialist shops as well as important historic and artistic attractions. Old Rauma and its surroundings were chosen as Finland's town centre of the year 2009.

Rauma's other internationally recognised cultural treasure is Sammallahdenmäki - the first (and currently only) archaeological site in Finland to be included on the list of UNESCO World Heritage sites. This impressive site of around 36 graves and burial cairns dates from the Finnish Bronze Age (1500-500 BC) and is set in beautiful forest surroundings. The site was added to the UNESCO World Heritage list in 1999.

With its beautiful parks and scenery, Rauma is also known as a picturesque seaside town. Arriving to the city by sea is an experience in itself, and the natural, historic beauty of the Rauma coast and archipelago form a central part of the new Bothnian Sea National Park.

How the Finns Live (3 hours)

Take a peek into how daily life once was in Finland by visiting a few homes in Rauma. People at different stages of their lives and living in different types of homes tell visitors of their lives, routines and homes.

The artistic home (museum) of the factory-owner Lönnströms is full of antiques and fine art collected by the family, and visitors get to experience their 1940s home and lifestyle.

The visit finishes with coffee and something nice at the café.

Sausage and Honey Tasting (3.5 hours)

The sausage is highly popular in Finnish cuisine and honey is sweetness at its most natural.

This trip explores local tastes in the form of Finnish sausages and different arctic honeys and lets visitors learn about how they are made.

Our first destination is the Kivikylän Palvaamo meat company. In 20 years the company has grown from a family's hobby into a meat producer employing 220 people. The company's products are made using 100% Finnish ingredients which come from local farms that don't use genetically modified feed. We get to hear a bit about the company and how sausages are made, and taste 5-10 of their most popular varieties of sausage. We can also see and smell a genuine, wood fired smoke sauna, in which the company's sauna-smoked meats are produced. There is also the possibility to buy their products from the factory shop.

Our next visit is to Finland's best known honey-making company Lappi-Hunaja. The company has won a number of awards and has over 60 years' experience. It employs around 15 million honey professionals; in around 300 hives, these professionals produce around 20,000 kilos of honey every year. 80% of this is exported, mostly to German-speaking countries in Europe.

We learn about the fascinating world of honey and bees and get to taste a number of rare varieties of honey. Tea and coffee are served along with something sweet featuring honey, and you can follow the busy life of the bees at the same time in a glass hive. In addition to honey products, the coffee shop also sells a selection of gift items and handicrafts.

Ideal group size is 25 people (minimum 15, maximum 50). A guide will be present for the whole trip. A visit to the archaeological UNESCO World Heritage site of Sammalahdenmäki is also worth incorporating into the trip. The ancient burial site is located in Lappi, very near to the two places visited on this excursion. If the burial site is included in the trip, the whole excursion will last around 4.5 hours.

Canoeing/Kayaking Trip (4 hours)

At the beginning of the trip participants are introduced to the canoes or kayaks, other equipment and safety information. If needed, we will also instruct in the basics of canoeing, making this trip ideal even for first-timers or those with a little experience. Our trip begins at the Otanlahti swimming beach, and we will canoe out to the nearby islands.

During the trip the instructor will give guidance on technique and on how the kayak behaves in the water. During the break we will brew some coffee over an open fire, then make our way back to Otanlahti.

The trip includes the use of the canoe or kayak, a cover and a paddle, instruction as necessary throughout the trip, and coffee. A wilderness lunch is also available. It is also possible to simply try canoeing.

Minimum group 3 people, maximum 20. Weather-appropriate clothing must be worn.
